THE latest Dictionaries of any language are generally the best; as the last editor must be very injudicious, should he not retain whatever appears to be valuable in former works of the like nature. If he be diligent and skilful, he cannot fail to insert what has been omitted by preceding lexicographers; and to correct mistakes of the press, or in the orthography and accents. A moderate degree of judgment will enable him to reject what is foreign to the subject; and to be careful in expunging what is only proper for a treatise of geography, or a dictionary of arts and sciences.

Three Dictionaries, in English and Spanish, have appeared in this country. The first was compiled by Capt. Stevens, who, having resided some years in Spain, undertook to publish an English and Spanish Dictionary, as we then had nothing of this kind worth attention. His compilation is far from being contemptible; and he availed himself with much industry of the Dictionaries of Nebrixa and Aldrete, that were then the best which had been published in Spain. His work was printed several times in the course of the last century.

After Capt. Stevens, Pineda pretended to make, as the phrase is, a perfect Spanish and English Dictionary; but the perfection of his work consisted in nothing more than in mutilating the Dictionary of Stevens in many places, and making a very few additions; though, in the preface to his book, Pineda took great liberties with the Spanish Academicians, who had compiled, in six large folio volumes, a Dictionary of their language, under the auspices, and at the expence of their king Philip the Fifth; and was hardy enough, in that preface, to dispute with those Academicians upon the subject of their orthography, which they had regulated in a proper manner.

To

A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

To Pineda succeeded Delpino, who likewise undertook to compile a better Spanish and English Dictionary than had hitherto appeared. It must be confessed, that with all his faults, he took the trouble of adjusting the orthography of the Spanish part, after the manner of the Spanish Academicians; and, in his preface, he justly blamed Pineda for not conforming to their orthography.

Delpino's edition being sold, and a new one wanted, the present compiler has corrected and enlarged it. This he has performed chiefly by the help of Johnson's Dictionary with regard to the English part, and of the Spanish Academicians with regard to the Spanish. He can with truth declare, that he has added little less than ten thousand words, and made many necessary erasures. As to the orthography, he has adhered to Johnson and the Academicians, without the least deviation. He does not pretend, that this work is a perfect one of the kind; on the contrary, he candidly owns, that it is still far from perfection. Mean while, the Englishman who intends to learn Spanish, and the Spaniard who studies English, will not often find themselves at a loss for the meaning of a word.

To conclude in Johnson's words, "of such a work as this, it is not necessary to say more; and it is presumed, it will not be found that truth required the editor to say less."

A NEW

DICTIONARY,

SPANISH and ENGLISH.

A

The first letter of the alphabet in all languages, and the first of the five vowels.

A is sometimes an article which marks the dative case either singular or plural; ex. à Pedro, to Peter; à los hombres, to the men.

A marks also the acusative case; ex. amo a Pedro, I love Peter.

A, in Spanish, sounds always like a in these English words, tall, war, call; ex. cadaver, a corpse; abanico, a fan.

A, f. f. ex. una buena A, a good A; una A bien hecha, an A well made.

It is used likewise before the articles el, la, and los; ex. à el hombre, to the man; à los Ingleses, to the Englishmen.

A is a preposition, which signifies to, into, at, &c. ex. ir à Roma, to go to Rome; ir al campo, to go into the country; à las tres, at three o'clock; à veinte leguas de aquí, twenty leagues off; à dos dedos de tierra, within two inches of the ground; à razón de seis por ciento, at the rate of six per cent; a la derecha, on the right hand.

A is also a particle which has several significations; sometimes it signifies the fashion; ex. vestida a la Francesa, dressed after the French fashion.

Sometimes the quality; ex. a prueba de bombas, bomb-proof.

Sometimes it is put for the adverb about; ex. nueve à diez mil hombres, about nine or ten thousand men.

A precedes many adverbs; ex. poco a poco, softly; a truceo, by changing; a brazo partido, by strength of arms; a vista de ojos, evidently; a pecho descubierto, sincerely.

It is also a particle of composition in many verbs, as from denda, lanza, palo, are formed, adeudar, alanzar, apalar, &c.

These are the principal senses wherein this letter is used; but there are some others besides, which can hardly be brought under the foregoing significations, or indeed under any particular rules; yet you will find them all in the series of this dictionary.
